"Interdisciplinary Diabetes Care at the Midvale CBC"

ON FEBRUARY 24, 2018 our pro bono board members of the IPE board Allie Smouse, Taylor Deveroux, and Catherine Fink, along with medical student Kate Peacock, will be presenting at the 2018 Society of Student–Run Free Clinics Annual Conference in Omaha, Nebraska. On November 1, 2017, their abstract submission was accepted and they were approved to speak at the upcoming conference. Students from around the country of all disciplines in healthcare will be attending and listening to them speak about some of the work being done through our pro bono services at the University of Utah.

Allie, Board Coordinator, and Taylor, Research Director, head the physical therapy aspect of IPE treatment nights that take place once a month at the Midvale CBC clinic. Local patients diagnosed with diabetes in need of pro bono services come to the clinic to receive interdisciplinary treatment from student physicians, physician assistants, physical therapists, occupational therapists, nurses, nutritionists, and pharmacists. In their presentation, they will be discussing the origination of this treatment night, their treatment model, problems they have faced and how they have overcome them, as well as current and future research associated with this project.

Last year at the Widener Conference, Allie, Taylor, and third year board member Andrea Corwin, presented about IPE diabetes treatment nights and this year they will be giving an update on improvements they have made including changes to treatment protocols as well as adding occupational therapists to the committee. Most importantly, they want to share with other healthcare students the benefits of working in interdisciplinary settings and the impact that it has made, especially as it relates to diabetes.

This presentation will also be delivered to University of Utah students and faculty at the HSEB at the beginning of February. Look out for more information about a date and location if you are interested in hearing more about IPE treatment nights. We wish them the best of luck and are proud of the work they have done thus far.

Both physical therapy and occupational therapy students are invited to volunteer to treat. Contact Allie at allie.smouse@utah.edu if you would like more information!
TO OUR THIRD YEAR PRO BONO BOARD MEMBERS

It is that time of year again when the third year PT students complete their didactic coursework in the program. For us, that means losing some wonderful board members as they begin their new clinicals in January. They have done incredible work on the board during their three years and we want to thank them for their dedication and drive to make this clinic what it is today. We will continue to do the same to bring about change and further success in the pro bono clinic.

A WORD FROM OUR THIRD YEAR DIRECTOR, LESLIE:

"I’m filled with mixed emotions as I write this. I’m happy and excited about upcoming internships and then moving on to a career that promises to be rewarding. But I’m also sad to be leaving such a great group of wonderful, dedicated people and friends. The last three years on the student-run pro bono clinic board was definitely the highlight of my physical therapy career so far.

I have learned so much with you all. I’ve learned that sometimes it’s not the most complicated idea that makes the most difference but the simplest – like having food at our meetings. Game changer! I’ve learned that if you ever feel lost, unmotivated or burnt out, the best thing to do is volunteer so that you remind yourself that’s it’s not about you and that what you do matters. I’ve learned that one person can make a difference – like producing newsletters, annual reports, getting volunteers, connecting people to get a medical Spanish course for our students, or organizing a party, fundraiser or conference. I’ve been amazed at what happens when you bring those individuals together – the group can make a lasting change for the community. In the three years my class has served on the board, we, along with our volunteers and counterparts, have saved individuals of greater Salt Lake City about $175,000 in physical therapy related medical costs, seen about 300 patients and logged over 3,500 volunteer hours.

I’m confident that the current board will continue to improve our clinic and make an even bigger impact on our community. You are amazing, inspiring, and full of great ideas. I’m excited for you!"

"The pro bono clinic was a big part of what drew me to the University of Utah’s program initially. Not only does it allow us students to learn so much, but helping local people in our community in need of our care who might not otherwise have the opportunity is so gratifying. Seeing students and physical therapists in the community come together to donate their time to help other people is truly an incredible thing."

"The attending physical therapists that I have had the chance to work with have been great in facilitating our learning. They guide us as needed, but they really allow us to think, arrive at conclusions, and brainstorm solutions on our own. It is a great experience as a student and we are learning so much while also doing something great by helping those who really need it."
THANK YOU TO ALL WHO HAVE DONATED!
